we've given a lot of thought to the entire logistics, both in terms of sports training and schooling experience. I think the kids have adapted very well and very quickly," said principal Deborah Tan. "We're happy to be part of the Youth Olympics and this historic moment."

While regular classes will be held at the Chinese International School, sports training will be conducted at the Ministry of Education's Co-Curricular Activities Branch (CCAB) and other locations around the island. They will move back to Woodlands on Aug 30.

Swimmer Dylan Tan and netballer Deborah Wong were just happy to soak in the experience after a morning training session at the CCAB. "It was good training in one pool with all my team-mates because we have two separate pools at the Sports School," said Dylan, 13.

Added 12-year-old Deborah: "Training at CCAB went quite well even though the court is more open and hotter, but it was still fun, and we're enjoying the move."

SINGAPORE — Monday assembly proved to be a new experience for some 400 student-athletes from the Singapore Sports School, as the school's staff and pupils spent their first day at their temporary home in the Chinese International School Singapore at Dunearn Road.

They had to vacate their Woodlands campus because the facility will be used for swimming, shooting and modern pentathlon during the Youth Olympic Games from Aug 14-26.

"We've had several months to prepare for the move, so
